STUDENTS TOLD OF DRUG DANGERS

Lectures Given In Every Homeroom

Within weeks every student at Lowell High School will have been told of the dangers of drugs and the potential trap they pose for all teenagers.

Classroom education about this serious problem confronting all America today, is being presented by two teachers of the Science Department — one a Biology teacher, the other a Chemistry teacher.

The program, which was inaugurated last year at the High School in an effort to alert all students to the perils of drugs, is conducted by means of lecture periods during study recess in every homeroom of the building.

Mr. Frederick Gallagher (Chemistry) lectures to Seniors and Juniors; Mr. Carl Garside (Biology) lectures to Freshmen and Sophomores; (In addition to being elected-teachers both men are also registered pharmacists and thereby have professional knowledge about various drugs and their effects.)

In addition to presenting the cold hard facts about the drug situation today, both teachers distribute literature dealing with the misuse of drugs to the students.

When time permits, a question and answer period follows the short talk.

The program to warn students of the dangers of drugs was inaugurated at the request of Headmaster Raymond A. Sullivan.

New Dress Code Marks Important Date

Thursday, March 27, 1969, was an important day for the students of Lowell High School because a new school dress code was established. This new code provides for the students to feel relaxed in the classroom, which is very important. According to the code, girls may wear the conventional style of dress for young ladies, including dress culottes, knee-high boots, and sandals with stockings. Boys may wear turtle necks, sweaters, dress shirts, sport shirts, but not polo shirts nor tee shirts. Ties, jackets, sport coats, and sweaters over shirts are no longer mandatory. This dress code is a great improvement over the previous one and hopefully everyone will go along with it.

OVER 800 NEW BOOKS ADDED TO SCHOOL LIBRARY

During this school year 835 new books have been added to the school library. The subjects of the books cover a variety of interests. The task of sorting and catagorizing these books was undertaken by the students on the library staff.

These students serve one period a day in the library, learning how to check books in and out, and how to replace them on the shelves. They also deliver the attendance slips to the study halls and learn the use of the card catalogue and reference station.

The card catalogue contains the names of every book in the library. They can be found listed under the author's name, the book's title, or the subject matter contained in the book.

On the upper left hand corner on the nonfiction book cards one finds a number according to the Dewey Decimal System of Classification and on the fiction book card one finds the word fiction and the first two letters of the author's surname. From this information the books are easily found on the shelves.

The reference station of the library includes fourteen sets of encyclopedias, which can be very helpful to students in school work on term papers, biographies, etc.

The librarian, Miss Ethel McCarthy, is always willing to help students who are unable to find needed information for school projects.

Student Council—Seniors

Since the Lowell High Student Council was founded to be irrelevant to the students and outdated in methods, a revamping in its make-up and a revision of its bylaws and procedures occurred recently.

As part of the transformation, a new electoral system was initiated to aid in making the council more representative of the entire student body and a better mediating group between faculty and students.
